Why sell through Microsoft Marketplace

docs.wetransact.io/why-sell-through-microsoft-marketplace

Microsoft Marketplace is Microsoft's online store for business software. When your product is listed there as a transactable offer, customers can buy it through their existing Microsoft agreement, and Microsoft handles the invoicing and collection, then pays you.

For a software company, it is a sales channel as well as a store: it shortens procurement, gives you a route to Microsoft's sales teams, and lets customers pay with budget they have already committed to Microsoft.

🟣 What it changes in your sales cycle

Usual problem	How Microsoft Marketplace helps
Buying takes months. Legal, security and procurement reviews for every new vendor.	The customer buys under the Microsoft agreement they already have. Microsoft is an approved vendor, so you become one more line on an existing bill.
Every customer starts cold. No warm route into the account.	Once you are co-sell eligible, Microsoft sellers can bring you into their accounts and get credit for selling your product.
Budget starts from zero. You compete for new spend.	Eligible purchases count toward the customer's Microsoft Azure Consumption Commitment (MACC), budget they have already agreed to spend with Microsoft.

🟣 Why your customers prefer it

Benefit for the customer	What it means
One bill	They pay Microsoft once instead of managing a separate supplier, contract and invoice for you.
Uses committed budget	If they have a MACC, buying your product through the marketplace helps them use spend they have already committed.
Faster procurement	No new vendor onboarding. Their team gets the short path as much as yours does.

🟣 What it takes to get there

Step	What it means	Read more
Get listed	Set up Partner Center and publish a transactable offer.	Free Trial & Self-Setup · Go Live in 5 Days with your CSM
Sell with private offers	Send customers negotiated prices and terms through the marketplace.	Private Plan & Private Offer SetUp
Get paid	Microsoft invoices the customer, collects, and pays you monthly.	Finance & Order
Co-sell with Microsoft	Meet Microsoft's requirements so its sellers work with you.	IP Co-Sell/Partnership

Doing this alone is hard: Partner Center setup, review rejections and unclear program criteria take most teams months. WeTransact does the setup with you and validates your eligibility along the way.

🟣 Good to know

Microsoft charges a store service fee on transactable marketplace sales. It is taken before your payout. WeTransact takes no share of your sales.

Not every offer counts toward MACC. The offer must be transactable and Azure benefit eligible, and the customer must have a MACC.

You stay in control. Offers are published under your own Partner Center account, and the customer relationship stays yours.

🟣 FAQs

Does my product have to run on Azure? No. Any B2B software can be listed. Some Microsoft programs, such as co-sell, have extra requirements.

Can existing customers move their contract to the marketplace? Yes. You can send an existing customer a private offer for a renewal or an upsell.

Who invoices the customer? Microsoft. The purchase appears on the customer's Microsoft invoice.

Still need help? Contact the WeTransact team at support@wetransact.io.

Always-current version of this guide: docs.wetransact.io/why-sell-through-microsoft-marketplace · Questions? Reply to this email and your CSM will pick it up.