Step 1: Open a Microsoft Support Ticket

Before trying any other steps, we recommend opening a support ticket with Microsoft. They can confirm whether the issue is related to your Partner Center configuration or account permissions.

Step 2: Try This Workaround

If you want to attempt a quick fix while waiting for support, follow the steps below:

1. Go to Partner Center.
1. Navigate to Account Settings → Legal Info.
1. Look for the person listed as the Primary Contact.
 - This person often has special access to Partner Center, as they were the one who originally created the account.
1. Contact this person and ask if they can complete the Commercial Marketplace enrollment on your behalf.

Step 3: Check the Identifiers Section with this person's account

- Go to the Identifiers section in Partner Center.
- Look for an existing Publisher ID.
- If a publisher is already listed, this means your organization is already enrolled in the Commercial Marketplace.

Step 4: Request User Access

If enrollment already exists:

1. Ask the Main Contact to invite you as a user in User Management.
1. Once invited, you will regain access and be able to manage your Marketplace settings.

Following these steps should resolve the issue and restore your access to the Commercial Marketplace.
