The screenshot shows the Microsoft Partner Center interface. The left sidebar contains a navigation menu with categories: Product benefits (Azure credits, Cloud services, Software, Developer tools), Support & Advisory benefits (Technical support & consultation, Technical pre-sales & deployment), Marketing benefits, and Logo Builder. The main content area is titled "Benefits | Azure credits" and includes a "Take a Tour" link. A notification banner states: "To access benefits seamlessly on Windows OS, please use Windows 10 or a higher version." Below this, a text box explains that users may receive two types of usage-based subscriptions (Azure) depending on active offers: Azure monthly credit (shown as a dollar amount per month) and Azure bulk credit (shown as a dollar amount credited once, consumed within one year). A "Quick help" sidebar on the right contains links for "How to assign users to Azure benefits?" and "When are my benefits expiring?". The main content area also features a "Benefits" section with a "View and remove assigned users" link. Below this, there are "Quick filters" for "Not Redeemed" and "Not Redeemed & Expiring in 3 months". A table displays the benefits, with columns for Benefit Name, Source (Program Name & Specialization), Quantity, Status, and Activate By. The table shows one entry: "Microsoft Azure" with a source of "Microsoft Azure V Success", a quantity of "$5000", a status of "Redeemed", and an activation date of "May 27, 2025".

To access benefits seamlessly on Windows OS, please use Windows 10 or a higher version.

You may receive two types of usage-based subscriptions (Azure) depending on the active offers available to your membership - Azure monthly credit and Azure bulk (yearly) credit.

Azure monthly credit is shown as dollar amount per month (USD or equivalent in local currency).

Azure bulk credit is shown as a dollar amount which is credited only once and must be consumed within one year of benefit provisioning.

Click on the individual benefit link in the table to view more details and activate the benefit.
